

Kleshas

*“yogena chittasya padena vacham
malam sharirasya cha vaidyakena yo’pakarottamam pravaram muninam patanjalin pranjaliranato’smi”*

The 4 different levels of Kleshas manifestation

In sutra II.4, it is described that ignorance and by extension the other 4 Kleshas can manifest in 4 different states: the dormant state, attenuated state, the interrupted state and active state.

We’re going to describe them to remind ourselves that just because we’re actively in grip of a Klesha doesn’t mean this affliction isn’t present within us.

Active status

If we are fully in the grip of affliction, it is called active. This is the only state in which we are aware of affliction. So it's important to realize that our perspective on all our afflictions is the same as our perception of an iceberg : we only see a tiny part of it.

Interrupted state

If an even stronger affliction cancels out a current affliction, that affliction is said to be interrupted. For example, let's say we're about to commit a bank robbery, we're so eager to get our hands on a bag full of money that we have no fear of being hurt. In this case, fear is interrupted by greed. It's not that the fear isn't there, but it's interrupted or suppressed by the stronger notion of greed.

Dormant state

For example, we may not be aware that the fear of death is present within us, because we've never had to fear for our lives. But if the right stimulus – a potentially life-threatening situation – is presented, the fear will surface. So the affliction, the fear of death, was in a dormant state. A dormant affliction will awaken once its object is presented. If the affliction doesn't appear at all, even in a dormant form, which means we no longer carry that affliction within us.

Attenuated state

If, for example, we are in a life-threatening situation and we react relatively calmly because, through the study of the Bhagavad Gita, we have understood that we are not the body, but rather a soul, the affliction is said to be alleviated by Kriya Yoga.

Only by first reducing our Kleshas through Kriya Yoga can we then eliminate them.

"I am afraid of Nothing... And Nothing is very scary...

Kleshas are here to remind us that we are just human and Vairagya, the detachment of Kleshas, reminds us that we are a D.िवine Soul"

Supa Mega Master Jedi-Yogi-Ninja-Diver-Rider-Surfer-Shaolin-Cool Monkey D. Luffy