

The consequences of Yama

"yogena chittasya padena vacham

malam sharirasya cha vaidyakena

yo'pakarottamam pravaram muninam

patanjalin pranjaliranato'smi"

Hari om tat sat

"Hari om tat sat" is a very sustained and sacred greeting. Hari = divinity

"Om" the eternal sound that will always be present in all

Tat sat = this is the eternal Truth

By pronouncing "Hari om tat sat" you're signifying to the person you're greeting his or her divinity. This could be translated as "I'm divine and you are divine too."

Namaste means "I bow before you," a formula that shows great humility.

The consequences applying Yama in your life

Ahimsa (II.35)

II.35 "Ahimsa-pratishthayam tat-sannidhan vauryataghah"

"If someone is settled in nonviolence, then all hostility disappears around him."

After attaining enlightenment, Buddha took to the jungle, where he came face to face with a bloodthirsty assassin named Anguliman, who tried to frighten Buddha. But Anguliman was so impressed by the Buddha's tranquility that he bowed to the Enlightened One. That's the power you get: when you're completely non-violent, all violence and self-hatred disappear.

Satya (II.36)

II.36 "Satya-pratishthayam kriyaphalashrayatvam"

"When you are established in a state of truth, action bears appropriate fruit."

The benefit integrity brings is that everything you say is true and will be realized.

Asteya (II.37)

II.37 "Asteya-pratishthayam sarvaratnopasthanam"

"When the desire to take disappears, the jewels appear."

When you don't steal material or intellectual goods, Nature will give you all the riches you need in return.

Brahmacharya (II.38)

II.38 Brahmacharyapratishthayam viryalabhah

"Being established in moderation gives good life energy."

Saving energy by practicing Brahmacharya will give the practitioner great physical strength.

Aparigraha (II.39)

II.39 "Aparigrahasthaire jnanmakathmta sambidah"

"When we free ourselves from the desire to possess, past and future lives reveal themselves."

If we are established in a way of life with no surplus of materials and no desire to possess more, then we realize the true meaning of life. This is when all past and future lives reveal themselves to us.

We can glimpse our future or past lives because we understand through non-accumulation the primary necessities for living and being happy, which is the goal of this life but also of all other past or future lives.

When we remember our past lives, we realize with Aparigraha that all the desires we want for this life have already been fulfilled in our previous lives.

Aparigraha is one of the most difficult Yamas to master: it's extremely hard to detach yourself from something you love.

"From the practice of Yama, Good consequences you will have but of your ego beware. The Cause of all the Evil consequences your ego is"
