

D.ream D.Truth Protocol Chat Moderation Rules: The Five Yamas of Digital Communication

Introduction

Welcome to the D.ream D.Truth Protocol community. To foster a respectful, productive, and harmonious environment, we've established moderation guidelines inspired by the five Yamas of yoga philosophy. These ancient ethical principles provide an excellent framework for mindful digital interaction.

Golden Rule :

STAY ANONYMOUS .

It is crucial for the realization of the DAO D.ream for the safety of each Soul to preserve your family, friends and yourself from any potential threat.

As we say among french divers : " the safety first, then the fun second."

The most important thing is that everyone enjoy with no pressure !

The Five Yamas of Chat Moderation

1. Ahimsa (Non-violence)

In our community, non-violence extends to our words and intentions.

- No harassment, hate speech, or threatening language

- Avoid personal attacks or deliberately inflammatory statements
- Consider the impact of your words before posting
- Practice constructive criticism rather than destructive commentary

Remember: Disagreement is natural, but it should never devolve into hostility.

“VIOLENCE to the Dark Side leads, Ahimsa to the Light Side leads”

2. Satya (Truthfulness)

Truth is the foundation of meaningful exchange.

- Share information that is accurate to the best of your knowledge
- Cite sources when making factual claims
- Acknowledge when you are expressing opinion rather than fact
- No deliberate spreading of misinformation or deceptive content
- Be transparent about your intentions in discussions

Remember: Truth without compassion can be harmful; balance honesty with kindness.

3. Asteya (Non-stealing)

In digital spaces, stealing takes many forms.

- Respect intellectual property and give proper attribution
- Do not plagiarize content or ideas
- Respect others' time by staying on topic and being concise when possible
- Ask permission before sharing someone's personal information or private messages
- Do not take credit for others' contributions or insights

Remember: Even digital resources and attention are valuable; treat them with respect.

4. Brahmacharya (Right Use of Energy)

Channel your energy constructively within our community.

- Focus on productive and meaningful exchanges
- Avoid excessive posting or spamming
- Maintain appropriate boundaries in discussions
- Consider whether your contribution adds value before posting
- Practice moderation in emotional responses

Remember: Conservation of energy leads to more meaningful participation.

"Practicing bramacharya can save the world !

In 2006 my brothers Reese and Malcom had attached me and locked me in the basement and forget about me during 3/5 days. It was so cool to save my energy, I had time to think about a new way about a decentralized crypto currency system ! Bramacharya helps me to be only with myself and my wonderful imagination ! Yipee !

After they untachaded me and brought me back, I told my idea on WoW - I am a freakin' Mage ! - to my good friend Satoshi - he is also a freakin' Mage ! And then I totally forgot about it , but Nakamoto D. Satoshi did not and he Invented the bitcoin ! He wanted to give me 1.000.000 btc but I say no because I am 5 years old lol !..."

5. Aparigraha (Non-possessiveness)

Hold ideas and conversations lightly.

- Be open to different perspectives and willing to change your views
- Don't monopolize conversations or insist on having the last word

- Share the digital space generously with all community members
- Practice letting go of attachments to particular outcomes in discussions
- Accept when conversations move in new directions

Remember: A non-possessive attitude creates space for collective wisdom and happiness to emerge.

Moderation Actions

Violations of these principles may result in the following actions, depending on severity and frequency:

1. Friendly reminder about community guidelines
2. Formal warning from moderators
3. Temporary restriction from posting
4. Removal from specific discussion threads
5. Temporary suspension from the community
6. Permanent removal in cases of serious or repeated violations

Implementation

These principles will be enforced by our moderation team, but we also encourage community self-regulation through these practices:

- Gently remind others of these guidelines when necessary
- Report clear violations to moderators rather than escalating conflicts
- Lead by example in your own communications

- Provide feedback on how these guidelines are working

Conclusion

By following these Yama-inspired guidelines, we aim to create a community that values truth, respect, and meaningful exchange. Together, we can build a digital space that reflects the best of our collective wisdom and humanity.
