

Summary in English

Title: White Mirror: D.Truth Sport - Episode 1

Runtime: ~20-25 minutes ???

In the premiere episode of White Mirror: D.Truth Sport, we meet Jim, aka Monkey, a geeky engineer by day and super-geek by night. The story begins with Monkey pranking his friend Rooster, hacking his laptop to display a Matrix-style message proclaiming Rooster as “the chosen one.” The episode dives into Monkey’s mundane corporate life, where he and his best friend Stan slack off, mock their ambitious colleague Dwight, and indulge in anime and gaming obsessions. Feeling unfulfilled, Monkey attends a circus workshop with his gaming buddy Phalouss, but finds socializing dull compared to his virtual adventures. After a string of romantic rejections, Monkey embarks on a soul-searching trip to Thailand, where he meets Kitkat, a Buddhist monk who introduces him to the concept of Sangha—spiritual community.

15 years after the ANNOUNCE : Monkey, now in his 50s, leads a meditation session with his Dream Truth Community (DTC) friends on a futuristic Thai island villa. The DTC, a revolutionary movement, blends spirituality, technology, and anonymity, logging their actions on a DTBlockchain. The group enjoys a holographic Dreamstation race, showcasing the DTC’s innovative D.Sport program, which gamifies fitness and personal growth. A parody ad mocks digital currencies and highlights the DTC’s transformative power, turning obese gamers into fit, anonymous champions. The episode closes on a Parisian rooftop, where Monkey and Jim play a virtual game with DTGoggles, revealing a battle between Godzilla and their Gundams. A mysterious post-credits scene with Picsou hints at a trillion-dollar treasure hunt, setting the stage for the DTC’s global impact.